Made More Complete by Professor Furtwangler.

New York, Nev. 30 - Hufus B. Richard- a larke block nearly six feet long and son at Athena, writes to the New York a feet high, with an inacription of three Evening Post as follows:

But to return to the excavations themes which I visited two days ago. To y may one great charm, viz., that they had say that the ship which had gon to the world as a finished piece of work more, the phantom of a woman appeared to the norm of the them and, when she had appeared to them and, when she had appeared the transfer which makes the interior are real council. The transfer which makes the interior are real council to them, saying "Wretches, how long are you going to keep backing waters" and urged them on, so that the whole Greek line heard her voice. on various temples with the divinity worshipped in the temples. They appear to have had in mind some question in regard to the Aeginetan sculptures, as appears in a note on page 19. Professor Furtwangier, himself, in his Beschrei-bung der Glyptobek Konig Ludwig L ready declared that the presence of Athona in both gables was no proof that the temple was hers. He then thought it a temple of Herakles. But no serious FAMOUS GABLE GROUPS to the current name: doubts only had een expressed, when all at once, with with the recent excavations , the certaints ame with a bluze of proof that the temple belonged to another divinity almost purely local and much inferior to the great goddess Athena.

First came three fragments of Inscrip-tions, all of which seemed to contain parts of the name Aphaea, and then came Exeming Post as follows:

Incontestably one of the most important events in the current year in the world of art and archaeology is the executation of the well-known temple of Aegina by Professor Furtwangier during the spring and summer, it can long have felt that the executations made in and around this temple is itsi, which had around this temple is itsi, which head around the four fragments in the debris used for filling, at a considerable depth below had inscribed in it a song of Pindar, The new name of the complete in-consideration that it would be difficult, surjection, but on the fragments of three others, will probably stand secure. One of the blocks is too large to have been transported very far. The only rift in where the statutes found in 1911 are lodg-the fact that Pansaham, mays: "It is true cal, and has recently made from the lum-that on the way as you go up to the room of the museum certain impur- mountain of Zeus Panhellenion. of the two strongs and fragments from the mountain of Zens Panhel-lenios was once supposed to be the best to find more statutes and fragments then should bring the two groups nearer discussion; but there is little room for the are example of the theroughness of very peak is used today in the same way statement of facts, I may say that Prof. Furtwangier is a little unjust as to the litness of this place to be the location of the Temple of Aphaea. In citing the passage in the narrative of Anton ins Dictynna-from Crets, her touching at Aegina, and her taking refuge in a grove in which her temple was afterwards set up, he denies the possibility of this region near the of the "opes" ever luving been a grove, calling it an ede. Several fig trees flourish on and about the terrace; and there is even now conwhich the cistern was cut. It is an in-teresting fact that the excavators of 1811 siderable himan there, in spite of long-siderable himan there, in spite of longprocess of denudation and washing down dation of debute. Cocherell did not think classical times. There is, moreover, a large elstern, or well rather, near the upper edge of the terrace, which seems fed by a percunial source at the bottom. I have, at any rate, in two different years-1594 and 1901-seen crowds the practically certain that the two tables of women washing to be taken in consideration ple precinct belonged, one to the east something to be taken in consideration something to be taken in consideration

The new discovery will hardly contribute anything toward fixing more exactly section of the building of the temple with an episode in the battle of Salamis. Herodotus, after the giving the Athenian as count of the beginning of the battle side after a few months to present brought on the batle, and that, further over to Aegina to fetch the Aracidas uvated with a care which not only ing to the build of the Assistant none which can not be passed by. The most unalloyed of all pleasures is that of reading. Reading is a delight that can be recalled at will, and when the choice of books is good there can be no sting to poison the memory of such a healthy enjoyment.

The only question that need arise is that of expense. Given the name of a first-rate author, and you only need figure on what you can afford to pay for one of his best works. The International Association of Newspapers and Authors does all this for you. The co-operation of the 40 greatest writers of the day has been secured. Each has surrendered the royalties on one of his or her best works, and you can now have this selection at the actual cost of production. The authors are amply repaid in the stimulus given to the reading of their works-and you reap the present benefit.
